

ICESP TAIPEI 2026

The 18th International Conference on Electrostatic Precipitation

2nd – 5th November 2026, Taipei

Introduction

NEXT DECADE of ESP in the TRANSITION to NET ZERO

The International Conference on Electrostatic Precipitation (ICESP) was first organized in Monterrey, CA, USA in 1981, then held every two years in different countries. After 40 years, we are thrilled to announce the ICESP be held for the very first time in Taipei in 2026! The conference will feature a one-day ESP School, followed by three days of plenary speeches, technical sessions, and an exclusive technical tour. We look forward to welcoming you to Taipei!

What Will You Gain

Strategic Partnerships

Engage and deepen collaboration across component manufacturers, end users, service providers, and academic researchers to drive greater opportunities in after-sales services, system optimization, and future upgrade initiatives.

Market Development

Expand and reinforce your brand presence through exposure to a wide network of users from Taiwan and South-East Asia across multiple industries, creating visibility and new business opportunities.

Compliance Trends

Understand how regulatory compliance trends across different regions influence the technologies, solutions, and operational approaches offered to meet evolving environmental and industry standards.

Industrial Networking

Connect and share insights on the challenges and breakthroughs ahead, and how Net-Zero is shaping the industry and driving new technologies and applications.
